The REBOL Documentation Project : yet another project... ?

Well yes...

With the small difference that the main goal of this project is to help the REBOL programming language to leave the shadow...

REBOL is an excellent language, but there exists only little of documentation available. And this is very often dispersed at the four corners of the earth in personal sites that only known by the initiated :-)

Our purpose is to index and refer here all those sites and the documentation which they contain. A concept which remains vague, a cool tutorial you vaguely remember the existence but don't not know any more where you saw it ? ... A jump on the site of the REBOL Documentation Project, a research using the search engine, and hop, found...

Why motivate people to publish new documentation on this site ?

We first of all wish to motivate the interested people to document REBOL. The site where this documentation is published does not matter.

However, some still hesitate... Why work days long to produce a quality document if nobody reads it ? Thus, we wish to help these authors by providing visibility to their work. And in order to facilitate their creation work, we also provide a support to their effort : author's guide, translator's guide, CVS Usage, editorial board to help with the redaction and to act as garanty of quality...

I have just had a look in the site, and I did not find much contents...

Our project is still young and must be built out...

This is why we require your assistance, even if you do not wish to become an author of documentation. The article Contribution/Help gives domains in which your assistance will be really extremely appreciated !
